Steven Simon Promoted to Vice President at TrenchSafety and Supply

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Steven Simon has been promoted to Vice President of TrenchSafety and Supply, Inc. The announcement was made by David Dow, Vice President and Secretary/Treasurer of TrenchSafety and Supply. TrenchSafety, founded in 1994, rents, sells, and services trench shoring and shielding equipment, confined space equipment, pipe plugs and testing equipment, steel road-crossing plate, safety supplies, and laser and GPS construction machine control equipment. Further, TrenchSafety is a major provider of worker construction-safety training throughout the Mid-South. The company has locations in Memphis and North Little Rock, Ark.

Following service with the U.S. Navy aboard the USS Eisenhower working in ordinance operations during the first Gulf War, Simon returned to Mississippi and attended ITT Technical Institute. He graduated in 1997 with an Applied Science degree in Electronics Engineering Technology, maintaining a 3.7 grade point average.

Simon began working at TrenchSafety and Supply in June 1997, as the growing company's first Laser and Machine Control Technician. He progressed steadily through various positions, most recently serving as Branch Manager of the Memphis location.

He has been heavily involved — at the Memphis and North Little Rock offices — in the company's safety training programs and in educating construction firms about the benefits of laser and machine control technology. He will continue in those capacities as Vice President.

“Steven is a real asset to TrenchSafety, but even more so to our customers,” Dow said in making the announcement. “He knows the construction business, he listens to our customers, and he has a full understanding of this emerging laser and GPS technology and its impact on construction efficiency. We're delighted Steven is on our team.”

Born and raised in Littleton, Colo., Simon lives in Senatobia, Miss., with his wife and daughter.
